

Dedication to CAB (Corna) Vorster

January 2011

Corna Vorster, who has been the proof reader for the SASJ since 1984, tendered her resignation to SASA earlier this year due to a serious illness. SASA would like to thank her for her efforts and assistance on the proof reading of the Journal.

Corna is one of those persons who do everything she undertakes with energy and dedication. Corna initially trained as a school teacher and taught in Wolmaransstad for a few years. She then joined the CSIR as a computer typist, and later the Department of Statistics at UNISA to edit study material, tutorial letters and exam papers for the Department, as well as for many others who needed her special ability as proof reader. Later, having completed a BSc degree in Statistics made her an exceptional editor for statistical material. She was also actively involved in the organisation of a few conferences organised by UNISA.

She was a founder member of the Statistical Terminology Workgroup (previously known as the “Woordeboek komitee”). This group started in 1992 before the annual SASA Conference and consisted initially of Faans Steyn (jnr), Chris Smit, John Lynch and Corna Vorster. They commenced by updating the Statistical Dictionary, then the group took statistical terms which were not in the list from the Encyclopaedia of Statistical Sciences and added them in. At present the database consists of about 9000 terms. It contains complete terms for which definitions and contexts were added, but also terms that only have the translation into Afrikaans with possible synonyms. The group retired in 2008.
